Others who were reported to have been present at this meeting with Davies were Lyle Munson and Edward Hunter, both of whom have been interviewed by the Bureau and the results furnished to the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice. Lyle Munson, Edward Hunter, and Davies have all testified before the McCarran Committee and the McCarran Committee has furnished their testimony to the Department of Justice for review and consideration for possible perjury on the part of Davies in testifying before the McCarran Committee. The McCarran Committee has pointed out that the charges against Davies result from testimony by Lyle Munson, a former CIA Agent, that Davies recommended CIA get guidance on Far East policies from the six individuals named above. Davies, in his testimony before the McCarran Committee, denied he made such a recommendation, but said he could not discuss the issue further because of secrecy restrictions.

The Department was furnished a copy of a "Secret" memorandum from [redacted] dated November 30, 1949, made available by General Walter B. Smith, Director of CIA.
